An aerial night view of a city skyline, likely New York City, featuring prominent skyscrapers like the Empire State Building and the Chrysler Building. The city is illuminated with warm yellow and orange lights, with streaks of light from traffic on highways. The sky is a soft gradient of blue and purple. The text is overlaid on the right side of the image.

Yehveniy Shwarts. To kill a dragon

Charlemagne. You can have a good rest here. Your town is so quiet. Nothing ever happens here.

Lancelot. Excuse me, but... You say this city of yours is very quiet?

Elsa. Sure.

Lancelot. But... But what about the dragon?

Elsa. Sir Lancelot, sorry, I beg you: never even mention it.

Lancelot. Why?

Elsa. Because there's nothing to do about it.

Lancelot. Really?

Charlemagne. Yes, there's nothing that can be done about it. Tomorrow, when the dragon takes you with him, I'll die either.

Charlemagne. All is over, all is over.

Fragment 1

I. Il'f and Ye. Petrov. The 12 chairs

Hundreds thousands of people, affluent people will rush to Vasiuki village (in Russian the settlement name implies “a god-forsaken redneck village”). First, the river transport would not handle such a flow of passengers. Therefore, the Moscow-Vasiuki highway will be built. That’s one thing. The second – holes and skyscrapers to accommodate people. Third – agriculture will flourish thousand miles around: the guests will consume food – vegetables, fruit, caviar, chocolates. The castle to accommodate the tournament - four. Five – building garages for guests’ vehicles. The giant radio station will be installed to broadcast tournament results across the globe. And Large Vasiuki airport will service mail airplanes and Zeppelins heading all over the world, even to Los Angeles and Melbourne.

An there will be time, when ocean liners are harbored on the river, and funiculars carry up to the city fat-faced foreigners, ladies in checkered suits, Australian adept of Indian martial arts, Hindustani in white turbans, Spanish party adherents, Germans, Frenchmen, New Zealanders, Amazon river basin tribes and our compatriots green with envy against Vasiuki residents – Moscow, Leningrad, Kyiv, Siberia and Odesa natives.

E. Uspenskiy. Adventures of Gena the Crocodile and his friends

No one interfered with the construction anymore. But the progress was pacing slow. "If the three of us will continue to build on our own", Gena once said, "then it takes a year at the best to complete our house!" We definitely need helping hands!"

"Right!" Cheburashka supported him. "And I even know where to find them."

"For whom do we build our house?"

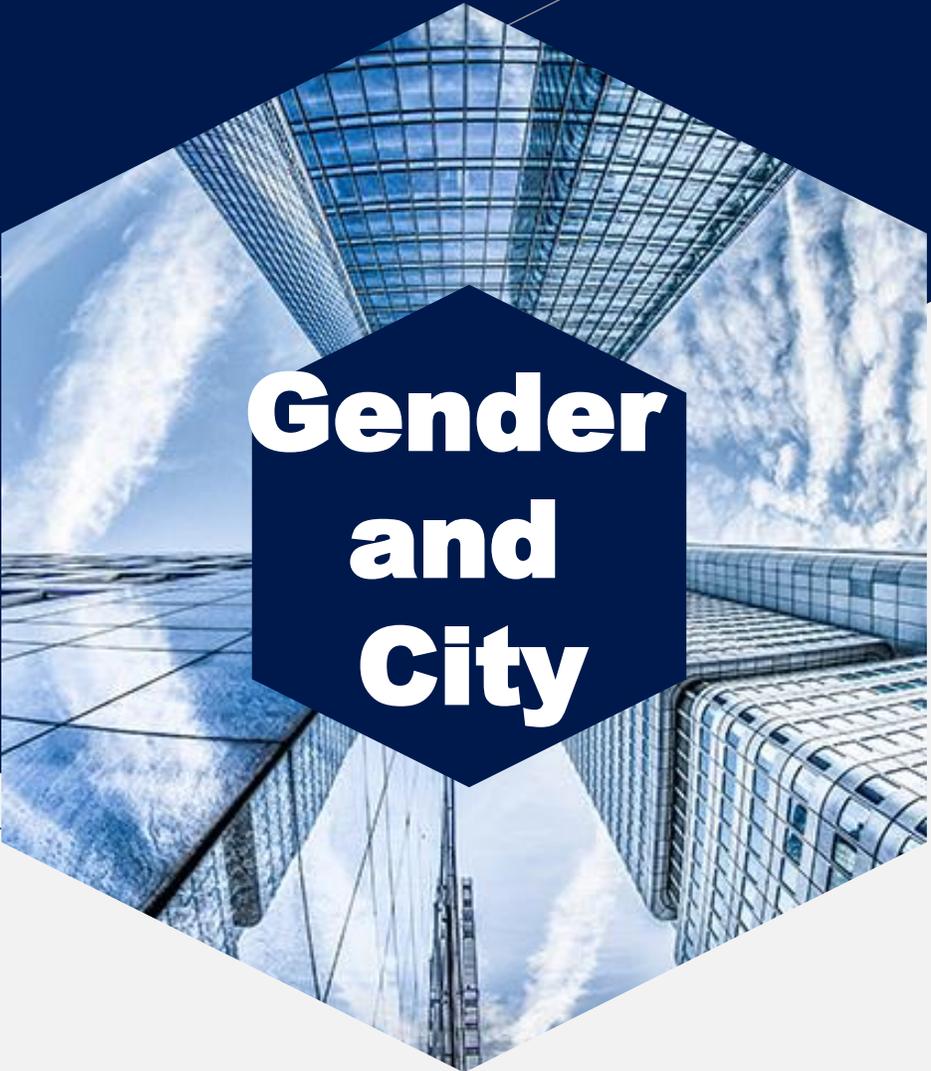

"For those who want to make friends!"

"Let them help us then! Right?"

"Right!" - Galya and the Crocodile said. "We must definitely call them!"

And folks willing to help started coming to the construction site. Aniuta the Giraffe arrived, Maria Frantsevna the Monkey and, of course, Dima, the slacking schoolboy, was there. In addition, very modest and well-bred girl Maroussia, an A-grader pupil, joined the builders.

They worked until late at night. And when the darkness fell, the Giraffe took a lantern in her mouth and lit up the construction site. However, you'd rather not say "thank you" to her, because she would have replies "you're welcome" and the lantern would drop straight on your head.
